VRITIMES

Fun Fact

The First Press Release Came Out of a Train Crash

Raise It With Press Release

swipe →

28 October 1906

A train run by a Pennsylvania Railroad subsidiary plunged off a bridge in Atlantic City, USA. Railways then usually kept reporters away and said little about the cause.

Source: Billy Penn (2023); Museum of Public Relations

VRITIMES

Ivy Lee Chose to Speak First

Publicist Ivy Lee wrote the company's own statement, handed it to reporters and gave them access to the site.

Source: Billy Penn (2023); Museum of Public Relations

Fun Fact

VRITIMES

30.10.1906

The New York Times printed it word for word

That statement is often called the first press release of modern public relations.

Source: Billy Penn (2023); Museum of Public Relations

VRITIMES

Lessons That Still Work 120 Years Later

- Speak first, before someone else frames your story
- Facts beat claims
- Make the journalist's job easier: access, data, sources

Fun Fact

VRITIMES

The Press Release Was Born in a Crisis. Now It's Built for Growth.

1. Save it for your next team training
2. Tag a colleague who loves PR history

Source:
· Billy Penn, 2023
· Museum of Public Relations