VRITIMES

press release 101

anatomy of a press release editors actually publish

not the ones they bin

Raise It With Press Release

swipe →

VRITIMES

01

the headline is news, not a slogan

Subject + action + impact. Aim for 10–14 words with a number or a place name.

example

× "Innovation Without Limits"

✓ "Singapore Logistics Start-up Opens 3 Johor Hubs, Cuts Cross-Border Delivery to One Day"

02

the lead answers 5w1h in two sentences

Editors decide in seconds. If paragraph one doesn't say what, who, when, where and why now, that is where reading stops.

VRITIMES

03

one quote with an actual opinion

A quote is not the place for "we are thrilled". Give a point of view, a number or a plan a reporter can lift.

example

× "We are thrilled to announce this milestone."
✓ "Cross-border next-day delivery used to be a big-company advantage. We are making it the default for SMEs."

VRITIMES

72%

of journalists call press releases the most useful resource from pr teams

Press releases aren't dead. Releases a newsroom can't use straight away are.

Source: Cision, State of the Media 2025

a body that is ready to use

- Inverted pyramid: the most important fact first
- Data with a comparison (up from what, to what?)
- 1–2 high-res photos with captions
- A media contact who actually picks up

05

the boilerplate: 3 sentences everyone underrates

Who you are, since when, how big, where, and your official link. Write it once, refresh it every quarter. Journalists copy it as is.

VRITIMES

check these 3 before you hit send

1. Headline: subject, action and a number?
2. Lead: 5W1H done in two sentences?
3. Quote: an opinion or a data point?

Source:
· Cision, State of the Media 2025